Explanation for Rejection of Claim

This claimant filed two claims on their behalf through A.B. Data's Online Filing Portal. The claimant listed Ghana as the location from which they entered into European Government Bond transactions. Based on the address provided and the location identified from which the trades were entered, both claims were rejected due to the claimant being an ineligible non-U.S. entity. Additionally, the transactions that the claimant provided in both claims were not transactions made directly from a Defendant, Deutsche Bank, or Rabobank. The counterparties listed in the claim were '24option' and 'XM.'

In support of both online submissions, the claimant provided screenshots of activity not involving transactions in European Government Bonds (pages 5-6). Two deficiency letters were sent to the claimant detailing their ineligibility (pages 7-10). The claimant responded to the deficiency letters by requesting court review of their claim (page 14). The claimant provided additional supporting documentation with this request. The documentation did not substantiate that the claimant had transacted in any European Government Bonds from or through a location within the U.S. (pages 21-32).

A.B. Data informed the claimant that the documentation provided did not cure the deficiencies of either claim, nor did they show any eligible transactions in European Government Bonds.

In conclusion, both claims were denied because this claimant was an ineligible non-U.S. entity, and had no eligible transactions in European Government Bonds.

Hello,

We have reviewed the supporting documentation you submitted. Unfortunately, it does not show your name, and the transactions appear to relate to cryptocurrency rather than the bonds at issue in this matter.
To support your claim, please provide clearer documentation that includes your name and demonstrates your eligible bond transactions.

Thank you.
